

STICKE

A collaborative online visual mapping application that detangles complex problems for individuals, teams and communities.

STICKE is an application developed by the Institute for Intelligent Systems Research and Innovation, Deakin University in collaboration with the Deakin Centre for Global Preventive Health and Nutrition (a World Health Organization Collaborating Centre for Obesity Prevention). This application aims to facilitate community knowledge exchange to foster shared understanding of complex problems.

Category

Software

Authors

View online

